

At Foz do Iguaçu, on 17-18 March 2005, the participants of the “First Roundtable on Sustainable Soy Conference”, representing different sectors such as big and small soy producers, soy processors, input suppliers, industry and trade, government and environmental organizations, the indigenous and scientific communities, and investors, appreciate the importance of having started a dialogue on the issue of soy and agree upon the following:

- 1- To acknowledge that soy production brings about social, economic, environmental and institutional benefits and problems;
- 2- To continue with the process for addressing these problems and develop and reinforce the chain for responsible soy production;
- 3- To ensure that this is a transparent, open, multi-sectoral, participatory and decentralized process.
- 4- To take into account issues discussed in the working groups in all future work.
